At this time our ClubRunner websites are operating normally again, no website outages are being reported. Your ClubRunner public website should function without issue.

Our team will continue to monitor our websites to ensure this remains the case. If you do have any issues or questions, please contact our Support team.

Our team has been observing infrequent and intermittent outages starting around 12:30pm US Eastern Standard time. This prevents public websites from loading properly. These outages last for less than a few minutes, then normal operation resumes.

We are investigating the root cause of these short intermittent outages. We will post more information as it is made available.
